

Sustainable Procurement Policy

The SENS Group seeks to use their activities to promote the transition to a better future. Through our performance as a company – and through the manner in which we perform our services.

In the interests of attaining of this overarching objective, analyzing the supply chains and the parties involved for ecological, social and economical impacts is a matter of course. Every company involved is obligated to keep their impact to a minimum due to the closely networked supply chains.

In this context, SENS aims to make saving 200 mil. tons of CO2 possible by 2030 by means of its business activities as its highest priority goal.

SENS is actively involved in safeguarding human rights. To this purpose, every link of the supply chain is holistically viewed. This also means that all suppliers and business partners are considered. We identify high-risk sectors, implement countermeasures within our supply network, and work closely together with the relevant suppliers and business partners. We achieve this by further developing sustainable practices and promoting long-term collaboration. We exchange views on requirements with stakeholders and customers and communicate proactively and always goal-oriented with our suppliers and business partners. For us, it is also a matter of course to pay attention to indications every time and follow up on these. Communications can be sent to us via compliance@steag.com.

We maintain the current environmental standards.

The SENS Group respects human rights and opposes any form of forced labor or child labor. It is important to us that the employees of our suppliers and business partners have a workspace that is free of dangers to life and limb as well as any form of discrimination, force, or harassment.

To that end, we adhere to at least all regulatory and legal requirements and provisions/specifications valid in the respective country wherever the SENS Group conducts business. Our work routines are defined in processes to be able to clearly state our requirements and expectations of us and our suppliers and business partners.

Our process perspective and working method allow us to attain continuous improvement. For all suppliers and business partners, the acceptance of the SENS Code of Conduct for suppliers and business partners is the binding basis for any business relationship. Our values and policies are available under <https://www.sens-energy.com/en/conditions/>.

This sustainable procurement policy is communicated within the entire SENS Group and accessible to the public. It is regularly reviewed to assess its validity and promote continuous and, above all, sustainable improvements.
